

Steve Khail of the Manitowoc Company was a very helpful person for this project and he was really the main drive that made me going to Wisconsin in mid-February. He can understand the enthusiasts like me since he was working number of hours on the Voyage of Vision, the book describing wonderfully the history of the company. We have met in his office in the Manitowoc headquarters and talked about the company history of building ships.